Service to Chubu Centrair International Airport Announced -New Flights from Nagoya (Chubu) to Sapporo (New Chitose) and Sendai-

- Twice-daily round-trip service to Sapporo and once-daily round-trip service to Sendai to begin December 24
- Flights will fly into Terminal 1 of Chubu Centrair International Airport

Osaka October 21, 2020 - Peach Aviation Limited (“Peach”; Representative Director and CEO: Takeaki Mori) announced new routes to Chubu Centrair International Airport today.

The two new routes are between Nagoya (Chubu) and Sapporo (New Chitose) and between Nagoya (Chubu) and Sendai. Both will begin on December 24. The Nagoya (Chubu) to Sapporo (New Chitose) route will make two round trips per day, and the Nagoya (Chubu) to Sendai route will make one daily round trip. Both will fly into Terminal 1 at Chubu Centrair International Airport. Airfares start at ¥4,690 for the Sapporo (New Chitose) route and ¥4,990 for the Sendai route. Tickets for both routes will go on sale today at 4:00 p.m.

When announcing the new routes to Chubu Centrair International Airport, Peach CEO Mori stated, “Peach’s mission is to continue to stably provide affordable air travel with low fares and to connect regions, with a priority on COVID-19 infection countermeasures. Despite the harsh environment surrounding the airline industry, we will contribute to the revitalization of Japan’s economy by fulfilling this mission.”

On October 25, Peach will move its Narita Airport operations from Terminal 3 to Terminal 1, which is directly connected to the train station. Furthermore, in addition to launching new service to Okinawa (Naha) from Sapporo (New Chitose) and Sendai, the airline will resume its international flights that are currently on hiatus, starting with service between Osaka (Kansai) and Taipei (Taoyuan) and followed by service from Tokyo (Haneda) and Tokyo (Narita) to Taipei (Taoyuan).

Going forward, Peach will continue to provide affordable travel at low fares as a bridge connecting regions and expand its network of flights, all while thoroughly implementing infection countermeasures.
